Eight prompts for thoughtful, Scripture-centered content

Start with a passage, a named translation, and your own approved notes. Replace the bracketed instructions with source material you have permission to use.

01 / Build a Scripture-centered outline

Using only the passage and source notes below, draft a 15-minute Bible study outline with a direct answer, historical and literary context, three teaching points, and one practical response. Give verse references for every Biblical claim. Separate what the text states from interpretation. Flag anything that needs checking. Source material: [paste passage, translation, and approved notes].

02 / Lead a small-group conversation

From the supplied passage, write six open questions that move from observation to interpretation to application. Include a facilitator note with verse references. Avoid leading questions and invented background details. Passage and approved notes: [paste sources].

03 / Plan a one-verse Short

Draft a 30-second spoken script around the supplied verse in context. Begin with a real question, give one clear explanation, and end with one practical action and a relevant study-page invitation. Mark any exact quotation and its translation. Do not promise outcomes. Source passage and study URL: [paste sources].

04 / Create original companion questions

Using these author-approved public book notes and Bible passages, create five original reflection questions and a one-week reading plan. Do not invent quotations or summarize chapters you have not received. Keep the Scripture passage central. Public notes and passages: [paste sources].

Before publishing: Verify every reference and quotation, review the interpretation, obtain permission for private stories or images, and keep a human responsible for the final teaching.

Eight prompts for thoughtful, Scripture-centered content

05 / Explore thumbnail ideas

Suggest six clear thumbnail concepts for this teaching. Use two to four readable words per concept. Make each match the actual message without sensational claims. Describe a simple image and strong mobile contrast. Approved teaching summary: [paste summary].

06 / Write useful page metadata

From this finished article, draft a clear title, a concise description, a direct-answer introduction, and three genuinely answered FAQs. Preserve the author's meaning and accurate references. Do not add keyword lists or claims of guaranteed rankings. Article: [paste approved article].

07 / Repurpose one approved teaching

Turn this approved teaching into a seven-day content plan with one short Scripture reflection, one discussion question, and one specific page link each day. Preserve context, vary the format, and mark every item for human review before publication. Teaching and relevant URLs: [paste sources].

08 / Describe artwork accessibly

Write concise alt text for the supplied image and page context. Describe visible elements and their purpose. Identify a Biblical scene as an illustration when appropriate. Do not invent identities, events, or text that is not visible. Image and page context: [attach image and describe purpose].

Before publishing: Verify every reference and quotation, review the interpretation, obtain permission for private stories or images, and keep a human responsible for the final teaching.
